City pursues legal action, cagey on details

The City of Moose Jaw is "pursuing legal remedies" against Mosaic Place's ticket seller, but the director of financial services refused to name the provider in question. However, the company in charge of such services is clearly identified on tickets for public events at Mosaic Place as Ticket Rocket.

City pursuing legal action against ticket seller

The City of Moose Jaw is “pursuing legal remedies” against Mosaic Place’s ticket seller, but the director of financial services refused to name the provider in question.

JANE GERSTER
MOOSE JAW TIMES-HERALD

During Monday night’s executive committee meeting, financial services director Brian Acker identified the company only as one that is contractually obligated to provide ticketing services.

The company in charge of such services is clearly identified on tickets for public events at Mosaic Place as Ticket Rocket. The Victoria, B.C.-based company did not return repeated requests for comment on Wednesday. The deal, which Acker told the Times-Herald he thinks was signed sometime in August, included “a substantial signing bonus” that the city has yet to receive. One of the “major impediments” for the beleaguered Downtown Facilities and Fieldhouse board’s cash flow is receiving the bonus, Acker told the committee. “That funding is key to the facilities having a positive cash flow for the remainder of the year,” he said. Without it, he said, the city will likely have to use what remains of the $405,000 council previously earmarked for the facilities. Already approximately $300,000 of public money has been spent to keep daily operations running smoothly. DFFH’s fiscal year lines up with the calendar year and ends Dec. 31. Acker said he “wouldn’t comment” on what exactly “legal remedies” entails.

The city’s financial services director Brian Acker refused to name the ticket provider, even though Ticket Rocket is clearly advertised on Mosaic Place tickets, including the Warriors’ tickets pictured here.

DFFH’s interim general manager Doug Campbell would only clarify insofar as to say “there is no lawsuit.”

Campbell also refused to name Ticket Rocket.

“We generally don’t comment publicly on any contractual discussion of this nature because it can jeopardize outcomes,” he said.

DFFH’s new interim board – composed of Coun. Brian Swanson, Crystal Froese, and Scott McMann – meets Thursday morning to discuss operations.

A September MNP report outlined extensive problems with management and basic governance structure. Froese did not return a Times-Herald call seeking comment and McMann declined to comment, claiming the legal nature.

Swanson acknowledged the public interest of the action – taxpayer dollars are propping up operations and DFFH is an arms-length city operation – but said he doesn’t know enough details yet to speak on the subject.

The interim board meets at 10:30 a.m. at Mosaic Place. The meeting is open to the public.

Surrogate victims honoured

John Howard Society honours local victim surrogates during special luncheon

WILLIAM STODALKA
MOOSE JAW TIMES-HERALD

Donna Blondeau admits she was sceptical of working as a victim surrogate at first.

Blondeau, the Moose Jaw Police Service’s victim services coordinator, has worked with the John Howard Society, helping out victims of crime. As she said it, victims of crime have made out the offenders who wronged them as “a monster, eight feet tall, and just want to hurt people.”

“I walked into that room and I’ve looked into that person charged with an offence and I’ve said, ‘This person could be my neighbour or anybody’s son or daughter,’” she said. “It completely changed how I felt about that.”

Blondeau works as a victim surrogate for the John Howard Society, one of three who were honoured in a special luncheon at Leisure Time Bingo Tuesday.

In certain cases, offenders will be given the opportunity to work through alternate arrangements with people who wronged them. These aren’t for anything serious, but rather less serious instances like spray painting graffiti.

Sometimes the offender and victim can work it out themselves. When the victim can’t, because of the emotions involved or another reason, Blondeau and others are called on to be victim surrogates.

“I make sure to treat people with respect,” said Blondeau. “This is an opportunity to take responsibility for what they’ve done.”

She said that she hasn’t seen someone go through the program twice, which she feels is one of the strengths of the program.

Sometimes the offender can offer a cash donation or volunteering at the homeless shelter, or another charity group in town, to make up for the damage he or she has caused.

This system doesn’t always work, though.

“I think (in the past 15 years) there’s only been one occasion where I walked away from mediation because I was told (by the offender) this is the way it was going to be,” Blondeau described. “I said, ‘See you later.’”

Blondeau is not the only victim surrogate involved. Another person is Deidre Wilson, who was on the opposite side before she came to be a victim surrogate. As she puts it, she was an offender, but rather than face a potential criminal record, she was instead offered mediation.

She sat on the John Howard Board, and after she resigned, was contacted and asked if she would like to act as a victim surrogate. She agreed.

able to turn her life around, she’s not sure if everyone involved with John Howard can. Sometimes, she knows that an offender will return.

“I don’t see you succeeding, which is sad but we always have to give them the benefit of a doubt,” Wilson said. Still, she enjoys what she does.

“It’s interesting seeing their (the offenders) side of story,” she said. “I like to see them improve and have a second chance.”
